3. The ERA is finding it increasingly difficult in the present highly competitive market, to locate and obtain the services of well-trained economists. In this case, however, the Agency recruiter points out that this applicant has a definite interest in research, that money is not a prime consideration with him, that he "has long preferred government as employer, and he is partial to residence in the east." In view of these facts, and in view of the applicant's excellent qualifications and the great need of the ERA for his services, it is hoped that favorable consideration can be given this case by OCI.
